ACCESS MANAGEMENT IN THE NEW MILLENNIUM

INTRODUCTION

Access management enters the new millennium with considerable momentum. Many States and local jurisdictions either have in place or are planning comprehensive access management programs. Others are actively practicing access control at the project level or through access permit programs. There continues to be significant interest in the concept because it can provide high returns at a relatively low cost.

This Overview highlights important concepts and future challenges as outlined by Ronald K. Giguere, FHWA. For his complete text, click here. For more information about each topic, click on one of the documents listed.
